Collision meant end of life

Western Review Staff

One person died while another was injured and taken to the hospital in a collision that occurred over the weekend at an intersection crossing Highway 22 south of Ennisville.

On July 11 around 9 p.m. Evansburg RCMP officers were dispatched and investigation found that a grain truck and a crude oil tanker had collided and resulted into fire.

"Both vehicles were immediately engulfed in flames," said a release on Alberta Police Report website. The victim had not been identified as of last weekend.

Highway 22 between Township Road 524 and 530 remained closed until the matter was sorted.

Officers, fire department and cleaning crew remained on site and advised motorists to use alternate routes.

Drayton Valley blossoms for Communities in Bloom

On July 9 national judges Claire Labege and Gerry Teahen with Communities in Bloom were in Drayton Valley touring the community with members of the local Communities in Bloom committee and dignitaries. After the tour was over it was time to celebrate as the community was invited down to a transformed Omni II for a celebration with hula hooping, watermelon eating, a free barbecue and a chance to watch Greece on the big screen. The event was made free for the public thanks to local sponsorship.

Judges give a thumbs up

Results of national competition won't be released until fall

Mamta Lulla
Western Review

Flowers check, history check, Drayton Valley check. Drayton Valley was on display for two VIP guests last week when the judges for the national Communities in Bloom competition toured the town.

After not quite 24 hours in Drayton Valley they seemed impressed with what they had seen during their stay.

"I think the visit we prepared for, we [were] filled up with what we were looking for about tidiness, the environment, all projects, landscaping, the urban forestry and the flower design as well as (the) heritage," said Communities in Bloom National Judge Claire Laberge. "The judges arrived on the evening of July 8 and were welcomed by the Canadian Girls in Training who were flying the peace dove."

"I think they were really touched, it's such a beautiful ceremony that the Canadian Girls in Training do, it's about peace on Earth and embracing all cultures and friendship within everybody. And they said they had never heard of it before, which is always nice," said local Communities in Bloom Committee Chair Nicole Nadreau. "The motto of the community 'pulling together' is really linked with all the people here, the groups and interest. Even in gardening, tidiness, and we could feel that there is an association between CIB committee members, they are everywhere, that's impressive," she said.

About 20 people toured historical sights and community highlights, starting at the Civic Centre, followed by the Drayton Valley Legion, original RCMP detachment on 51 Ave., Drayton Valley Bakery, Community Learning Garden, 4-S Skatepark, the Museum, Rotary Peninsula Nordic Community Trails, among others, as the judges learned about the history of the town.

"It's a great experience and it's not just put on for us. It's been carried on for 10-14 years, it's a great way to draw your community to get together. I think your volunteerism, and your community involvement and your civic pride is outstanding in your community," said Communities in Bloom National Judge Gerry Teahen at the completion of the tour.

"I feel it is very clean, I find all aspects we were looking for, we experienced all that. We look at tidiness of community, we look at volunteerism, heritage, landscaping, floral display and forestry, and all of those things we experienced in our city," he said.

Laberge added that they experienced town's motto being well portrayed in all the areas last week.

"The motto of the community 'pulling together' is really linked with all the people here, the groups and interest. Even in gardening, tidiness, and we could feel that there is an association between CIB committee members, they are everywhere, that's impressive," she said.

Following the judging a free community event drew more than 200 people to the Complex for a 50s themed party that included a barbecue, watermelon eating contest, hula hooping and showing of Grasse on the big screen.

The results of the competition won't be known until September, said the judges who had set other municipalities to visit as well, all vying for the title.

"There hasn't been a community where Claire and I have experienced, that they can't do better. No one has ever gotten 100 per cent. It's always nice to be a winner. But it's not a matter of winning or losing, it's about this program enhancing your community and civic pride and getting the people involved and realize what they had in their own community and being proud of it and not afraid of showcasing it. And whether you win or lose, you're all winners because when you put that effort forward, it's a win-win situation. It's wonderful and Drayton Valley is doing very well," said Teahen.

SEARCH FOR MISSING MAN
Last week the land and water search continued for a 25-year-old man who jumped into the water at the Brazeau Dam Canal on July 1 and never resurfaced.

MAN FACING CHARGES FOR POSSESSION OF PROPERTY
A call about a stunting on a rural property in the early morning hours of July 6 resulted in an arrest and charges. Following a preliminary investigation police called in the assistance of the RCMP Police Dog Service to locate a suspect. A man was tracked and arrested and has been charged with possession of property obtained by crime valued at more than $5,000 and possession of property obtained by crime valued at less than $5,000.

BE AWARE OF NOISE LEVELS
As nice weather and summer nights bring people outside, Drayton Valley RCMP are asking residents to be aware and respectful of their neighbours when it comes to noise.

DRAYTON VALLEY RCMP
Cpl. Marcia McDermott said RCMP have been receiving lots of noise complaints. Residents are reminded to be aware of their surroundings and remember that noise can carry, so try to be mindful of noise levels and how it may be disturbing others. Police are also reminding neighbours of the need to be reasonable when it comes to noise and for everyone to use some discretion – whether they're creating the noise, or listening to it.

Potential danger not worth the bragging rights

There seems to be a magical time of night in Drayton Valley when local streets suddenly transform into drag strips. On a warm night, when windows are open, or a still night when noise carries, or on any night if you have the misfortune of living along a street popular for the activity, it is easy to hear drivers testing their speedometers. It's not a new phenomenon, residents in some neighbourhoods would tell you it's an activity and a disruption they are very familiar with. Aside from the obvious noise annoyance, the consequences have the potential to be far more serious than disrupting sleep. Those types of speeds are dangerous enough on highways and major roads, where there are fewer potential hazards and fewer people. But in town, in residential neighbourhoods the margin for error is minuscule and the chance of unexpected obstacles is high. A cat or dog darting across the road, a hand-on-pedestrian crossing the road, debris on the street — these are all perfectly plausible scenarios that could cause a loss of control that could cause a collision, either with another vehicle, a person, or an object like a house or power pole. By last Friday morning 19:00, people had died in collisions on Alberta highways since July 1. Closer to home a fiery collision closed Hwy. 22 last Friday night. So, when I was informed we were switching to a new web-based e-mail program, only a little more than a year after moving to web-based from Mail, I was not pleased. "Well, I'm going to have to tell" I vehemently burst through to any one who would listen, and then just to the universe after my co-workers started ignoring me. "Why do we need to switch? What's wrong with what we have? I just figured out most of the quills from this one." In actual fact the program we were using was not that great, as I frequently fished error messages and had difficulty letting me open and/or delete e-mails on some of its more ordinary days. I could frequently be heard yelling things like "WHY WON'T YOU DELETE?" or "PLEASE, JUST LET ME OPEN THIS E-MAIL!" I was assured that the new program was far superior to what we were using and is, in fact, far too superior for my antiquated computer. This has resulted in such charming quips as not being able to forward e-mails and not being able to embed my signatures in e-mails. It also seems to have strange limitations such as forcing me to download every attachment separately instead of in bulk. You may think these problems are easily solved by doing some updates on my computer. Ah, but you're not taking into consideration

Almost there...

There and Back Courtney Walker

just how old and overworked my machine is. Just thinking the word "update" is enough to make my computer start emitting all manner of whining and clanking. The last time I attempted to update a program it basically imploded, leaving me with a useless mess. I haven't been able to watch YouTube videos of Benedict Cumberbatch (strictly for research purposes) on that computer for months, and waiting for hilarious gifts of cats doing things to lead is nothing short of torturous. The same goes for accessing my e-mail. Things start off well. I sign in and it politely tells me "Hi!" Then I wait. And I wait. And I wait. Then something happens. "Still working on it" the program tells me. At this point I take a few minutes to stare off into space, half-heartedly try to straighten some papers, do a few stretches in my chair, marvel at the amount of junk food wrappers that are in my garbage can, send a few texts, and check back in. "Still working on it." OK, time to start contemplating the meaning of life. As I'm sitting what a dang road that is to travel down, the program moves onto the next stage. "Almost there." Excited that the end is in sight I have only enough time to make myself a cup of tea. Oh, that pesky hang up! It's been bothering me all morning and gave me final and decisive "THAT'S THIS E-MAIL!" before my inbox finally popped.

Tales from retail

Manta's Musings Manta Lulla

Talk about going and being unable to stop. You know when you learned to ride a bike, the first time you were able to balance it on your own and the person you trusted said they won't let go but obviously they did! Remember the first thought that popped into your head? Mine was, so... I have to keep going now, because obviously when I stop I will trip and fall over. That is how I've been feeling the past couple days. I have had enough running around. One of the reasons for it is because I took up another job. Yeah, what do you know, I am back to working two jobs. A schedule I've been familiar with since last year. It is a cashier job at a local liquor business with hours that work with my primary job here at the Western Review. I'm no expert but in my three weeks of working there I can now tell you the different types of customers that come in through that door. Type A: The silent kind. These are usually men who are getting off work and want their stop to be as quick as possible. If it were up to them, they would rather the store was a stop in the middle of a lake so they could fish for their dinner and drink their beer until eternity. In all honesty, I secretly hope for the same eternity dream. Type B: The nerdy kind. This one is my favourite. I may come across as someone who has refused to return her copy of Mean Girls, but I must assure you I have because I have it on Blu Ray. I kid. But we have often heard that with good looks is accompanied by this sense of accomplishment? That happens more than you would believe. On the other hand, the one with big glasses and a huge Einstein shirt are the ones that smile and are gracious when you cash them out. Maybe they should be proud of their accomplishment of being better human beings. Oh okay, I'll lend you my Blu Ray. Type C: The chatty kind. Sometimes they are those adorable stay-at-home moms. They shop for a bottle of wine and always greet you with a nod. They are patient and have time for you if you are slow, which I certainly am. Just ask any of my bosses. Don't go about helping this type, because they know exactly what they want. Just like another kind of customer of a certain age who come in hoping to find more than just a good drink. Ahem. Type D: The unmentionables. And there aren't too many of them. Unusually one per shift would be it. I had a customer come in a few days ago and he asks, "what's your name?" "Prayank?" The words, "No, is your name Bob?" didn't come out of my mouth because well, it's a good job. I wouldn't want to get fired. But yeah, this kind sure exists too. All in all, customers are amazing. I ding and dang their liquor and spend my time in liquor paradise. Cheers to that. "Note to self" Don't let mommy read this.

Around the water cooler...

Welcome, welcome, come one, come all to this latest edition of the water cooler. To start this off right we wanted to send huge happy birthday out to a very special guy who is turning 20! This cute loves puppies, tractors and worshipping anyone who is watching with his somersault skills. He's multi-talented and mega adorable — and a ginger to boot! Lots of love and hugs to Levi Horn!

Speaking of ginger... There's going to be a sea of red descending on Drayton Valley this week (see what we did with that nice segue). Sometimes we earn our pay cheques). Of course, talking about the RCMP Musical Ride in Drayton Valley on Facebook. Don't forget that money raised from the event goes to support the Drayton Valley Health Services Foundation C4740 campaign. Although registration to take part in some of the activities that will be part of annual Parks Day celebrations is closed, the community is invited to come to Willey West Community and enjoy a community barbecue on July 19 from 4-6 p.m.

And under. Just a reminder, there is no guaranteed seating for tickets purchased at the gate, so get there early to snag a seat and grab something from the concession. Those who want to get a closer look at the horses who perform as part of the musical ride can head down to Omni 10 on July 16 between 6 p.m. and 3 p.m. when the tables will be open to the public. For more information check out the RCMP Musical Ride in Drayton Valley on Facebook. Don't forget that money raised from the event goes to support the Drayton Valley Health Services Foundation C4740 campaign. Although registration to take part in some of the activities that will be part of annual Parks Day celebrations is closed, the community is invited to come to Willey West Community and enjoy a community barbecue on July 19 from 4-6 p.m.

A presentation by Alberta Parks will follow the barbecue, so head over to the picnic area at the campground to celebrate the importance of parks in our community. Drayton Valley will be playing host to a different kind of event July 25-26 when the Alberta Trappers Association hosts its 41st annual Rendezvous and Outdoorsman Show. The event will be held at the Omniplex and will include trapper and fur handling competitions and demonstrations, a trade show and lots more. To find out more look for Alberta Trappers Rendezvous on Facebook or go to www.albertatrappers.com. Now time for that familiar plea. If you have a birthday, anniversary or congratulations message you want to share in the water cooler e-mail courtesy of whaleng@draytonmedia.ca, or give her a call at 780-542-5380. Have a jubilous July week!

PROPOSED COMMERCIAL CENTRE MODERNIZATION DRAYTON VALLEY, AB

This architectural concept drawing shows plans for redevelopment of the building that sits at the corner of 52 Ave. and 51 St. in the downtown core. The redevelopment will be anchored by Anytime Fitness and developer Moe Hamdon hopes it will also include a dance school and retail storefronts. Renovations to the building are expected to begin this summer.

Renovations expected to start this summer

Courtney Whalen
Western Review

There may have been a bit of nostalgia at play when Moe Hamdon purchased the building at the corner of 52 Ave. and 51 St. but with a major tenant secured and renovations poised to start he's excited about revitalizing a major building in the downtown core.

Hamdon purchased the building, which dominates the corner of 52nd and 51st, around two years ago and now plans are coming together for redevelopment.

"I will begin renovations this summer," said Hamdon.

The building's main tenant will be Anytime Fitness, a 24/7 access fitness centre chain with thousands of locations around the globe, which will take up 6,100 square feet of space.

Hamdon is also hoping the renovated building will become home to a dance studio as well as additional retail space. "Seas, which is currently housed in the building, will stay put. Last week Hamdon admitted that having grown up in the community and seeing the different evolutions of the building, when it came up for sale that nostalgia played a part. However, so did the belief that bringing new life to the building would provide a good opportunity and also help strengthen the downtown.

"A strong downtown is always a sign of a strong community," said Hamdon, who is also developing a new condominium complex under construction in the downtown area, adjacent to the Brick and Iron Foods.

He's also excited to bring the major fitness chain to Drayton Valley.

With its ease of access, combination of equipment and classes and perks being part of a large chain will bring to members, he believes it is something needed in the community.

"I think it is. With a lot of shift workers in town they're looking for 24/7 access," he said.

Joining him in bringing the gym to town is Cory Peebles. After working with Hamdon on town council and getting to know his business approach, Peebles said he was eager to get involved when he found out what Hamdon was planning.

"So I told him I wanted in because I've always been passionate about fitness," said Peebles.

The two will be heading to the U.S. for franchise training this summer and are eager to be open for later this year.

"We're trying to do something different," said Peebles. "I think the accessibility — in an old building — is key."

"With everything that Anytime Fitness has to offer we're very confident that people will be excited about our gym," said Hamdon.

With the development permit approved and a building permit applied for, Hamdon said redevelopment of the entire building will start as soon as all the proper permits are in place.

Workers remain in limbo

Delays and uncertainties for foreign workers threaten to kill their Canadian dream

Mamta Lulla Western Review

Far away from home, not being able to work, but somehow having to meet the monthly bill payments, describes the daily life of one immigrant living in Drayton Valley as the government tries to sort through and sort out its Temporary Foreign Worker Program.

A moratorium surrounding foreign workers in the food industry introduced in April has been lifted, but the wait continues for this immigrant, and others like her.

Jesly, who wasn't comfortable giving her last name, said her work visa expired in April and was submitted for the renewal process, but was placed on hold due to the moratorium that was put in place around the same time.

Without her work permit, she hasn't been able to work since then and it doesn't look like she will be back to work anytime soon.

"I was forced to stop working. I called CIC (Citizenship and Immigration Canada), as per my application, they will hear a feedback in October," she said.

"I was expecting when the moratorium was lifted there would be answers to all those questions, but there are no answers. It's really frustrating right now," she added.

Meanwhile, her expenses are catching up with her. "I am paying my rent, my bills, my phone bill. I don't have any income coming in. I've been waiting since April," she said.

There are other immigrant workers who came to work in Canada and share similar stories. Because of the increased processing times, Jessica, a foreign worker from Ireland working at a local company in Drayton Valley, said she is worried her process time is longer than the amount of time she has left to stay in the country.

"My process time is two years and I only have a year and half left to stay in Canada," she said.

"The wait times are getting delayed and delayed. When I came here first, when I applied for work permit, and received it and came to Canada, they've completely changed the rules. I don't know if I would've come if I knew the current situation I would be in," she said.

"Because now I am looking at going home having to return, and if I do, the skills that I have gained here in Canada won't apply wherever I go."

Gina Linkinno, who owns a cleaning company in Drayton Valley said she relies on her contract workers (four, currently) as most locals want to work with the company on a part-time basis and her business needs a steady flow.

"I'll be forced to closed down my business. It's so hard to go into contracts (cleaning contracts) when you don't have steady people. Don't get me wrong. I hired local people but they don't stay for too long. The longest time a local stayed is six months and latest for 15 days. We started in 2008 and in 2011 and 2012, we shut down because we didn't have people," she said.

With the changes made by the government, it would now cost $1,000 for each foreign worker applicant.

The worst part is LMO (Labour Market Opinion) is $1,000 each person you hire. How can I pay $4,000 for them to renew? I am just a cleaning business. It's going to kill small businesses," she added.

Select Placements Ltd. is a recruitment agency that helps its clients with the LMO process. The managing director agreed that the process costs more and has become more time consuming with detailed questions.

"The application is very detailed, they're asking for a lot more and if you make a mistake you have to start all over again and pay another $1,000. I understand why, it's for people to look harder locally, and shy away from the program. But things are different in different parts of Canada. It doesn't really help our problems here. It's not the same in Toronto as it is in Drayton Valley," said Select Placements Ltd. managing director Kathryn Regnier.

"An issue needed to be addressed, there needed to be a response. But as to whether or not the response that they've come up with will be effective, I don't think it will be as effective as they're hoping. Because the people who are going to abuse the program are these companies, whether it's $275 for an application or a $1,000, they're still going to abuse it. Whether it's five hours to put an application to get or 10 hours, they will still abuse the program," she said.

Yellowhead MP Rob Merrifield said finding workers in this area is a chronic problem and the Temporary Foreign Worker Program only provided a temporary solution.

"Foreign workers coming in for two years will not be a permanent solution. Temporary FWP is to have a supplement or buffer," he said.

He is hoping to push for a permanent solution, which he believes is pressing for permanent residency.

"I have asked temporary foreign workers - none of them want to go home. I have asked employers, if they need these workers, and they agree to go long term," he said.

MP hopes to see permanent residency process streamlined

So what happens to all the current foreign workers?

Merrifield said, "The problem is they were coming under a temporary program, hoping for permanency."

Merrifield is hoping for permanent residency for immigrants with the right skill set and agreed that the wait times for permanent residency applications in the province has increased recently, because immigrants often get their residency and leave to go elsewhere, which doesn't really help the region.

He said labour force isn't short across Canada, it is mostly just in Alberta and particularly in the Yellowhead area and so there need to be ways for these jobs to be attractive for Canadians.

"People won't move across the country for $10 jobs. Our offer is to Canadians first and some of the entry-level jobs are not attractive enough to Canadians. So I anticipate the salaries will go up for these jobs," he said.

Such jobs would include cashier positions or working in the food services industry, Merrifield confirmed.

He said streamlining permanent residency is a work-in-progress and it would take a team approach to make jobs attractive enough and to let everyone know of their availability.

The President of Drayton Valley Multicultural Association Anila Gammara said, "government went from one end to the other in order to find a solution, and by the time they realize they went too far, it may be too late."

Limkinso said these immigrants who are already here have contributed to the economy, and sending these workers home would be a step back for Drayton Valley.

"When I came to Drayton Valley in 2006, most of the fast food restaurants closed at noon time especially on weekends because they were short staffed," she said.

She has also raised the question of CPP contributions and taxes that immigrants pay, just like Canadians. She said Merrifield's office has told her the money will be given back to them when they turn 65.

"If a contract worker leaves, at least return the CPP contribution to them," she added.

Merrifield said, that isn't his area of expertise, but the workers won't get the contributions until they were 65 even if they were in Canada.

He advised individuals with questions, to contact his office as sometimes cases are looked after on an individual basis. Regnier said the government will have to have many conversations to come up with solution that will work for everyone.

"It's a hard situation to be in, I wouldn't want to be on either side. I am involved because of my clients but I wouldn't want to be business owners or foreign worker or the Canadian government trying to figure out how to regulate this. It's a very complicated situation," she added.

CSO FOR MAN WHO FLED FROM POLICE

A 22-year-old who refused to stop for police twice, evading them by travelling at high rates of speed in residential areas and into the Omniplex parking lot, will be under house arrest for six months as part of a one year conditional sentence order (CSO).

On Mar. 27 around 4:25 p.m. Drayton Valley RCMP saw a man, discovered to be Kenneth Caron, get into a truck they had under observation as suspicious. A further check showed the truck had been reported stolen. When police activated their emergency lights in an attempt to get the driver to stop the truck, he accelerated, refusing to stop and started travelling at high rates of speed on residential roads, which were snow covered at the time.

Deciding that continuing to pursue the driver was too risky in the residential setting, police de-activated their lights and contacted additional officers to be on the look out for the vehicle.

At one point the truck was followed into the Omniplex parking lot and when police once again tried to get the driver to stop, he accelerated out of the parking lot quickly. Police lost sight of the vehicle in the area of Range Road 81. However, the next day it was located after RCMP received a report of an abandoned vehicle.

The court heard that when police contacted Caron about the incident he provided a full statement.

Caron's lawyer, Doug Holman, told the court last week that his client maintains he had no involvement in the theft of the vehicle, however it was on his parent's property and he was going to move it when police saw him getting in. Holman said his client panicked, which is why he didn't stop for police.

Last week Caron pleaded guilty to possession of property obtained by crime, flight from police and a charge of failing to report to police. The Crown and defence were seeking a one-year conditional sentence order, where Caron will be under house arrest for six months and must abide by a curfew for the second six months.

The judge agreed to the joint submission.

CUSTODY FOR POSSESSION OF PROPERTY

A man had more than two months left to serve in jail after being sentenced on June 30.

Koby Ida was sentenced on a charge of possession of stolen property valued at more than $5,000.

Ida was given a five month jail sentence on the charge, with credit for 69 days spent in pre-sentence custody, leaving him with 81 days left to serve as of June 30.

MAN ARRESTED WITH SAWED OFF SHOTGUN GETS TIME SERVED

A 21-year-old man was sentenced to 49 days in jail after pleading guilty to having possession of a sawed off shotgun.

Graham Earle was arrested on June 6 after first fleeing from police. Around 3 a.m. that morning an officer on patrol saw a man crouched over a bag. When the officer approached Earle, he ran and a foot pursuit took place. When the officer located Earle in a backyard he saw the man drop some objects on the ground, including a sawed off shotgun. After a brief altercation Earle was subdued by the officer and arrested.

Last week the court heard that Earle had been in custody since being arrested. Defence lawyer Doug Holman said at the time the sawed off shotgun had not been loaded. He told the court that his client had been associating with individuals who gave him the firearm and asked him to get rid of it.

With credit for a day and half for every day served in custody, Earle has the equivalent of 49 days in custody. The Crown and defence were requesting the judge consider a sentence of time served. She agreed.

MAN FINED FOR CARELESS DRIVING

A case that is more than two years old was resolved last week when Richard White pleaded guilty to careless driving in Drayton Valley Provincial Court.

White pleaded guilty to careless driving and the Crown withdrew charges he was originally facing in -uding refusing or failing to provide a breath sample and resisting a peace officer.

The charges date back to Mar. 10, 2012. Last week in court Crown Prosecutor Christine Palmer read in facts that supported the guilty plea to careless driving, stating that on that evening Drayton Valley RCMP on patrol saw a pickup truck travelling at a high rate of speed and a traffic stop was initiated.

Last week White's lawyer said his client admitted to driving in a careless manner.

The 38-year-old was issued a $1,000 fine.

Family members remember Kevin O'Flaherty as a man who loved having fun, spending time with family and friends, and enjoyed teasing those around him.

Family misses 'everything'

Kevin O'Flaherty was killed in a collision in April

Courtney Whalen
Western Review

Kevin O'Flaherty was a hard working and talented carpenter who loved playing horseshoes, spending a lazy day floating down the river or quadding, but above all, he loved his family and the time they got to spend together. On Apr. 28, as Kevin was heading to work, his vehicle was T-Boned after a vehicle allegedly failed to yield at a posted yield sign, striking Kevin's truck and killing him. His death has left a void in the lives of his wife Connie Brown, three children, his family and those who called him friend.

Last week his family, including Brown, mom Brenda Hodgson and sister Kym Hodgson, wanted to share some of their memories of the man they love, who was taken from them that morning. "He was an awesome dad," said Brown, holding a picture of a grinning Kevin. "His family life and his home life, that's what was important."

When all three children, including his son Aiden and stepdaughters Jasmine and Grace, were together the family would plan a special outing, or just spend time working in the yard, being together as a family.

Kevin treasured the time spent with all his loved ones and last week the three women remembered the times they would gather at the home of Brenda Hodgson and husband Gerald, just five minutes from where Kevin and Brown live, for special occasions, or just to help eat some prime rib mom, noting it was something he used throughout his life.

One of his favourite jokes was to say, "Do you want to meet Al... Al Decide."

at the bar so he'll always have a place there.

For times Kevin couldn't be found at that spot, it was likely because he and Gerald Hodgson had made their way back to the horseshoe pits to indulge in another favourite pastime.

"They would disappear back to the horseshoe pit for hours," said Brenda Hodgson.

A cross welded by a family member now sits at that spot as a way to remember Kevin, as well. Although willing to do anything to help his family and those he called friends, Kevin also enjoyed getting a rise out of them with his own particular brand of teasing, something all of them experienced.

He had a very quirky sense of humour," said his mom, noting it was something he used throughout his life.

One of his favourite jokes was to say, "Do you want to meet Al... Al Decide."

Fun-loving family man remembered

KEVIN from pg. 10

That humour, which Kym Hodgson remembered with a shake of her head last week at some of Kevin's teasing, is just one of the things the family has missed since he was killed. For Brown it's a morning ritual the two shared that is one of the hardest things that's absent.

"I miss that goodbye kiss every morning," she said, noting Kevin never left the house without stopping for that goodbye.

His family said Kevin was well liked and well respected by those who knew him and hundreds of people came to say goodbye at the celebration of his life that was held. The thing the family wants people to remember about Kevin is simple: "Just what a good person he was," said Brown.

He was just a family

guy. He'd just help anyone," added Brenda Hodgson.

He was just a family guy. He'd just help anyone.

— Brenda Hodgson

The women in Kevin's family are keeping him with them by wearing matching necklaces adorned with his thumbprint. Friends and family are also getting matching hoodies with "KMO Rocks" on the back. These are a few tangible ways to remember the man they love. But every day they continue to miss "everything" about Kevin, they said.

"There is no way to sum up Kevin's life on a piece of paper, it is impossible. There are so many things we loved about him, his love of family and friends, his fierce loyalty to those he loved, his quirky dry sense of humour, that crooked grin and sparkle in his eye," says an excerpt read at the celebration of life that was held.

The collision that killed Kevin is something they think about as well.

"Just one second of distraction," said Brenda Hodgson.

"Changed so many lives," continued Brown. The 23-year-old driver of the other vehicle involved in the collision is charged with failing to yield at a yield sign.

Last week O'Flaherty's family was in the courtroom hoping for a resolution. That resolution didn't come. The man will be back in court on Aug. 5.

Braceau County to add to staff

Braceau County to create new positions

Lesley Allan
Western Review

Involving a service agency in an event performed by a third party organization, Braceau County is set to create new positions within the municipality in order to meet the level of service required by council and residents.

In a press release distributed July 8, Braceau County stated that an expanding population within the municipality made it necessary to have the county's organizational structure reviewed in order to ensure that it was providing the right services, at adequate levels, with the proper personnel, for its residents.

Performed by Zap Municipal Consulting Inc. the review looked at the municipality's strengths, weaknesses, opportunities, and threats. In order to determine where areas for improvement existed.

According to Braceau County, the results of our service capacity review confirmed our hunch that the existing work load placed on our people far exceeds existing capacity," she said in the release.

For example, the number of pending applications in our planning and development department already exceeds the total number received in all of 2013 and the timeliness of approving these applications is critical to maintain the good weather days for the construction season.

Based on a review of the county's approved organizational chart, the 2014/15 approved annual budget, including the 2014 service delivery review document, as well as input from municipal staff, the consultant made recommendations that would involve the hiring of five new positions, eight of which would be full-time equivalent positions, while one would be full time term position. These include hires in planning and development, community services and corporate services.

To ensure all positions are created and filled in the best way possible, she says the task will not be taken lightly.

The vision and commitment that we, council and administration, have to move this county forward is to strategically increase our capacity. We do not expect this to be a short or quick process with the global competition for skilled people," she stated in the release.

During the review Zap Con consulting compared Braceau County to similar municipal entities with larger populations, resource based economies, that are delivering a wide range of services. The comparison showed that Braceau County is on the "low end" with respect to the number of full-time equivalent positions, and noted that three of the municipalities with smaller work forces do not provide the same level of services.

Fire Services briefs

FIRE SERVICES HELP IN SEARCH FOR MISSING MAN
Last week, members of the Drayton Valley/Braceau County Fire Services were continuing to help in the search for a man who went missing at the Braceau Canal the beginning of the month.

"We're assisting with the ongoing search," said Deputy Fire Chief Kamil Lasek, 1 week.

The fire department was working with RCMP out of Rocky Mountain House as part of the search efforts after a 25-year-old man jumped into the water the Braceau Dam area and never resurfaced.

Three Beaverbombs had been at the dam with a group of people swimming on Canada Day. Rocky Mountain House RCMP received the report around 8:30 p.m. July 1.

According to police, rescue crews with boats and sonar began the search immediately, as well as searching on land and air, but the man wasn't located. The search continued last week. Lasek said the Drayton Valley/Braceau County Fire Services had been involved in the extensive search of the area and canal around where Beaverbombs was last seen.

In addition to the involvement in the search for the missing swimmer the fire department received three calls for service last week.

On July 4 the fire services responded to an alarm call at a local apartment building. When they arrived they found there was no fire or emergency.

On July 5 firefighters were dispatched to a single vehicle collision, however the collision was then determined to be in Weiskirchen County and the response was cancelled.

The following day members from Station No. 2 in Breton responded to a single vehicle collision in the area of Hwy 416 and Hwy 20.

TAKE FIRE SAFETY ON THE ROAD WITH YOU
The summer months are prime time for readers to head up the motorhome or RV and get away for some rest and relaxation. But just because you're leaving your car behind for a few days doesn't mean you can forget about fire safety.

Drayton Valley/Braceau County Fire Services Deputy

Fire Chief Kamil Lasek said the fire services strongly recommend those who are travelling or staying in RVs or motorhomes take the same precautions they would at home. It is recommended that RVs and motorhomes be equipped with fire alarms, carbon monoxide and propane alarms.

Be sure to follow the manufacturer's instructions for installation, use and maintenance and, if the alarm is battery operated, be sure to check or change the batteries before hitting the road.

Many of the alarms start to go off, exit the motorhome or RV immediately, if no cause for the alarm can be determined, be sure to ventilate the RV thoroughly and reset all alarms. Be sure to check for any trouble-shooting tips from the manufacturer if there continues to be a problem with the alarms. Lasek said if in doubt of a potential cause for what is setting off the alarms contact the fire department.

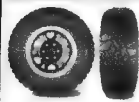

Travelers should also check their RVs or motorhomes to ensure they have a small fire extinguisher that is in good working condition before they head for their destination.

Local hunters continue with reality show

The Replacements showcase first season of group's own reality show

Lesley Allan
Western Review

It started as a passion, morphed into a national competition, and now enters the stage as a possible new career as four local hunters once again grace the small screen for their first full season as The Replacements on Wild TV.

Comprised of four local hunters, Matt Middlemiss, Chad Teluske, Brad Hollnary, and Marc

Andre, the team came into existence as they took part in the first Canadian hunting reality contest. Beginning to shoot footage for the series in 2012, the show aired in 2013 and by the end of its run the four local hunters were selected as one of two winners thanks to high points given by the industry professionals were judging, alongside viewer voting.

The outcome of their win meant the four guys received sponsorship from Wild TV to cover the costs of airing the show, which after months of hard work went to air for the very first episode on June 30.

"Hopefully people can relate to us because we're just like everybody else," says Middlemiss about the show and how he hopes others receive it. "We aren't some high paid movie star trying to make TV shows because that's what they're told to do, it's more blue collar and we're going to try and help out the local community as much as we can and as much as our schedule allows."

"This takes up a lot of time for us and then we still have family and work to deal with as well," he adds. "So we've tried and will continue to try to get out and help in the community as much as possible."

With three episodes of the 13 week season already aired, Middlemiss says anyone who has missed the show so far this season will be able to catch up, as Wild TV will broadcast all the episodes again once the first full rotation is over.

news ATVs stolen, one recovered

CRIME STOPPERS

The Thorby/Bretton RCMP is investigating the break and enter to a residence and outbuildings at a property outside of Lindale. Perpetrators attended the property more than once between July 5 and 6, stealing two ATVs and multiple tools and other items. One ATV has since been recovered, found slashed in the bush outside of Drayton Valley.

The Breton/Thorby RCMP is investigating a theft of a holiday trailer sometime between June 27 and 30 as a trailer was stolen from an acreage on Hwy. 13 near Buck Lake. The trailer is a white 2007 K21AG, model 29 BS. The plate that is attached to it is W91894, and has a decal of a jaguar on the front.

Breton/Thorby RCMP are investigating a break and enter. On May 26 a break and enter in a residence occurred near Aleska. It occurred during the afternoon, during daylight. The perpetrator took some firearms including a nickel plated Winchester 28-28, passport and money from the house. Remember to secure your valuables and firearms properly.

On May 23 Breton RCMP received a complaint of a theft of tires near Buck Creek. The tires were mounted on rims and had an 18" diameter. These tires were displayed for sale adjacent Hwy 22 north of the Hwy 616 intersection.

On Apr. 13 just before 4 p.m. a burgundy coloured four door diesel P-150 pickup truck, with a diesel slip tank in the box, fueled up with $500.07 worth of diesel and left the Modeste Creek Gas Station without paying. The male driver was described as being shorter with dark curly hair, wearing sunglasses and a ball cap. The truck headed south on Hwy. 20.

On Mar. 24, Breton RCMP received a complaint of a stolen Dodge 3500 Diesel truck and a Gator made 30' flatbed trailer from a lease site west of Breton. The truck was equipped with GPS tracking, and was recovered a short time later. The trailer was disconnected from the truck and found abandoned on another lease road not far from the initial theft.

On Mar. 16, Breton RCMP received a complaint of break and enter into a residence near Buck Creek. The property owners had trail cameras in place on the property, which aided in the identification of the persons responsible. With the evidence Breton RCMP charged David Adams and Heather White from the Drayton Valley area with breaking and entering into a residence, theft under $5,000, and mischief to property under $5,000.

If you know who is responsible for these crimes, please contact your local RCMP detachment, or call Crime Stoppers at 1-800-222-TIPS or online at TipSubmit.com. If your tip leads to an arrest you may qualify for a reward. Tips provided by the telephone or the Internet are anonymous and secure.

WILDFIRE ON PARC'S
10K+ STILL ACTIVE
 A wildfire burning in the Banff National Park, Alberta, is still active, according to a report from Parks Canada. The wildfire, which started on the evening of Thursday, July 3, has grown to roughly 2,600 hectares since it started, with approximately 700 hectares of burned land in Banff National Park.

The wildfire is located on the east side of the park, near the town of Canmore. The fire is currently contained within a 10-kilometre radius, but it is still active and could spread further if conditions worsen.

Parks Canada is currently monitoring the fire and has set up a control line to prevent it from spreading further. The fire is currently contained within a 10-kilometre radius, but it is still active and could spread further if conditions worsen.

The fire is currently contained within a 10-kilometre radius, but it is still active and could spread further if conditions worsen. Parks Canada is currently monitoring the fire and has set up a control line to prevent it from spreading further.

It was initially around 200 hectares when we first got a good understanding of its size. We only had about 30 hectares within Banff National Park, and the remaining burned areas were within the province of Alberta," said Parks Canada education and outreach officer Rachel Penzell.

So far, the fire hasn't threatened any Parks Canada infrastructure. Highway 11 was closed for a period of time Sunday, but was reopened Monday, and Highway 93 remains open. Penzell said what while there is currently no need to protect the Saskatchewan Crossing area or the Saskatchewan River watershed, Parks Canada has the resources available to do so if necessary.

Signage will be placed on Highway 93 North and Highway 11 indicating no stopping zones due to fire operations and smoke in the area. A closure is currently in place for the Warden Lake trail, and boat access to the North Saskatchewan river is restricted between the Highway 93 north bridge and the Banff National Park eastern boundary.

Penzell said that while wild fires can indeed be destructive, they also play a vital role in keeping the landscape of the park healthy and diverse.

"Parks Canada use fire as an ecosystem restoration process. In the process of suppressing fires we end up with large build-ups of fuel and it decreases the overall diversity on the landscape. In the long-term, fire really improves park ecosystem diversity and it's a regenerative process," she said.

"It can look really devastating and destructive, but it's got potential to restore ecosystem diversity and it's a really positive regenerative process over time in terms of creating diversity within a forest, different age classes, different species."

PADDLE THE YUKON RIVER
 Peace River Record-Gazette

What started out as two friends talking while working the night shift, ended in the completion of the world's longest canoe race.

Stephen Byrne and Spoke Buruma are avid canoeists, good friends and co-workers at DMI in Peace River. The two talked on and off for several years about taking part in the Yukon River Quest. This year the stars aligned and they were able to go.

The race is 715 kilometres starting in Whitehorse and ending in Dawson City. This year there were 66 teams representing 13 different countries. It's the longest canoe and kayak race in the world.

The first rest stop was 26 hours into their journey. "Sleep deprivation was definitely the most challenging aspect," said Buruma. "Towards the first checkpoint I was starting to hallucinate."

At one point as they were approaching the rest stop Buruma asked Byrne if he could see the people on the shore. Byrne said to ask them how far it was to the rest stop. That was a hallucination, though, said Buruma.

"We knew we were stubborn and that would help," said Byrne. "But our real strength was our ability to read the lake, to keep us from capsizing."

The route takes paddlers through some of the Yukon's most pristine wilderness. Byrne and Buruma said they saw grizzlies on the shore at one point. "You have to carry supplies with you," said Byrne. "You're required to bring enough to survive in the wilderness for a couple of days, including food and a tent."

Buruma and Byrne said they participated for the experience and never thought seriously about winning.

"About a third of the racers there are really serious, and those guys do the circuits and race," said Buruma. "For us the goal was to do it and finish. They said they're not sure they'd compete in the race again."

"I think for us that was such a good run, there were no problems," said Buruma. "You can't top that for me it would be a hard one to top."

He said in the future they might consider a trip down the National river, though it's more leisurely pace.

ALBERTA GOV'T SELLING LANDS NEAR CARBOON HABITAT

Hinton, Alta. (Herald)

Environmentalists are upset over the provincial government's continuing sale of endangered caribou habitat.

But a spokesman for Alberta Environment says they are working on range plans to protect the endangered animals, with two of the plans concerning herds near Hinton that should be implemented by the end of this year.

The Alberta Wilderness Association criticized the most recent round of caribou habitat sales on June 25, when Alberta Energy leased 264 hectares in west-central Alberta and 264 hectares in northeast Alberta for oil and gas development. The new leases will further harm herds near Grande Cache and the west Athabasca, according to the AWA.

"Alberta's caribou will soon disappear without new rules, whereas mineral resources will not go away and can be extracted with a greatly reduced footprint compatible with caribou," stated Caryn Campbell, AWA conservation specialist. "The Alberta government has it backwards by making caribou wait for range plans to be developed, while not pausing oil and gas leasing in their ranges."

Caribou habitat in the endangered Narraway herd is facing over 80 per cent disturbed habitat, while the West side of Athabasca River herd's habitat could be over 70 per cent disturbed, noted the AWA in a June 25 press release. These disturbance levels are past the 35 per cent limit under the federal Species at Risk Act.

Central mountain population caribou in Alberta and B.C. were reclassified in May as an "endangered" species by the federal government's Committee on the Status of Endangered Wildlife in Canada.

Kevin Zahara, press secretary for Alberta Environment Minister Robin Campbell, said the provincial government should have protection plans in place by the end of this year for the A La Piche and Little Smoky herds, which range between Hinton and Grande Cache.

"In those ranges we have placed a temporary hold on the sale of new Crown mineral agreements," Zahara said, adding that forestry companies have deferred logging in the area until range plans are complete. "We'll be continuing on to develop range plans in other parts of the province."

Alberta has 16 woodland caribou populations remaining in Alberta and all but three of them are in decline, he said.

Industry still has to go through regulatory processes for leases, which may or may not be developed depending on compliance, Zahara noted. Companies must ensure that they are reducing their environmental impact.

"We want to ensure that we have well-sustained caribou populations throughout the province," he said. "This is an issue that doesn't just impact Alberta, it impacts provinces throughout the country."

The A La Piche and Little Smoky herds had an estimated 135 and 78 animals remaining as of last November.

Alberta Wilderness Association vice-president

Cliff Wallis said they are pressuring the government to ensure there are permanent and legally designated protected areas for endangered caribou.

"That's the only hope that we have going forward," Wallis said. "Everything else is just words spoken by a politician."

"Legal processes" take time, Wallis continued. "I don't think these animals have the time Alberta is probably the most heavily impacted."

WESTERN GREBE PERSISTS IN THE FACE OF DEVELOPMENT

Stirling, Alta. (Sunshine News)

You just never know what kind of accidents are hanging out in your backyard — at least, according to a recent study of a threatened bird population on Lake Isle and Wabamun Lake.

The western grebe, a thoroughly majestic bird with blood-red eyes, was the topic of investigation for researchers Mara Erickson, Christine found-Jackson and Mark Boyce, who decided it was high time someone looked into the effects human encroachment has had on their habitat.

The result of the study, which considered 13 Albian lakes, were both encouraging and informative: the birds are surviving, but we need to give them a helping hand.

"These birds are persisting on lakes with high development rates, but in some cases, their numbers aren't doing great," said Erickson, who added she did a separate analysis on their numbers apart from the habitat study.

"It really depends on how people use the lake. A lake can be completely developed along the shoreline, but let's say nobody ever goes in the water — then the birds might be fine. But, if everybody is bringing their boat, or if there is a new launch built right by a nesting site, that could affect the birds. It could disturb them in the point where they don't nest."

The study found Lake Wabamun has a fairly stable grebe population, something Erickson found surprising given the amount of development around the lake.

Lake Isle, on the other hand, had more questionable results.

"Lake Isle is the one where the numbers definitely go up and down. They've never been more than about 150, 170 birds in the nesting colony, (and) the last couple years, they haven't had huge nesting success," Erickson said.

The best thing people can do, she noted, is respect their colonies and be aware they exist. The birds typically nest all in one spot.

Additionally, Erickson cautions lake-goers to be careful not to upset the balance of habitat grebes need. That includes "emergent vegetation" — vegetation that has its roots in the water but protrudes from the surface, such as bulrushes or cattails.

"Western grebes do prefer the bulrush, and I think that's because it's thick and dense enough that they can build a nest right in it, but it's not too thick that they can't swim around in it," Erickson explained.

"That's an issue we see, especially since a lot of the bulrush beds are right along the shoreline. People really like having weed-free beaches and things like that, so a lot of time people like to clear that out just for aesthetic purposes. (But bulrushes) are actually really good for the wildlife there, and for the water," it drains the water."

Additionally, as grebes are diving birds, they need both depth and a healthy fish population. That can be a problem for fishermen who use nets — Erickson says the use of nets in Lac Ste. Anne have caught grebes before.

As for water conditions, such as blue-green algae, a big concern for Lake Isle, which was the first lake in Parkland County this year to be issued a health advisory by Alberta Health Services about the presence of the toxic algae, Erickson says she's not sure it affects the birds directly. It does, however, affect fish populations, which in turn affects the grebe.

"This year, there was a big winter kill of the fish in Lake Isle. That was attributed to the amount of algae that depleted the water of oxygen for the fish," she said.

In all, the study found western grebes persisted on 27 of the original 43 lakes known to support their population during the past 40 years, with evidence of breeding on 10 of those 27 and established nesting colonies on eight of those 10.

Overheating lowers productivity, endangers workers

Dear Working Man:
I'm working on a road repair crew this summer. A couple of days have already been so hot that I feel like I was going to pass out. What can I do to keep my cool this summer?

Signed, Overheated

Dear Overheated:

After a relentless winter and wet spring, summer has finally arrived and that means it is time for work clothes and employers to start thinking about working safely in the heat.

Our bodies work best in a very narrow temperature range. Raising or lowering your core temperature a couple of degrees beyond normal (98.6°F or 37°C) can cause severe damage to your brain, heart and other organs.

Our bodies regulate temperature by sweating and shivering. If you don't replace the fluid you lose from sweating, you can dehydrate and your body will stop sweating. Heat will build up and you will be in serious trouble.

Early warning signs of heat stress include headache, dizziness, fatigue, feeling faint, irritability, heavy sweating, heat rash, muscle cramps, dehydration, and changes in breathing and pulse.

Keep your cool this summer by following these tips:

- Create shade and work in the shade when possible.
- Take short frequent breaks

• Wear reflective/insulated cover clothing near heat sources

• Limit your sun exposure especially during peak times (Noon - 3 p.m.)

• Drink small amounts of water frequently, e.g., a cup every 20 minutes.

• Wear loose-fitting lightweight clothing that wicks sweat away from the skin.

• Avoid caffeinated drinks, alcohol and pop, because they tend to dehydrate you.

• Wear a wide-brimmed hat, UV absorbent sunglasses and minimum SPF 30 sunscreen.

• You and your employer can also help limit the effects of working in the heat by:

- Avoiding intense physical activity during the hottest times.
- Implementing a schedule of work and rest periods, and
- Providing a cool rest area for workers to recuperate.

Other ways to keep cool at work include:

- Lower the air temperature with air conditioning.
- Increase air circulation by using a fan or opening a door or window.
- Lowering the humidity using an air conditioner, dehumidifier or ventilation system.
- Rotating workers between more and less demanding activities.
- Decreasing exposure to radiant heat (e.g., asphalt, heavy machinery, etc.) by moving hot equipment away from the work area, moving the work away from things that radiate heat, or by using barriers to reflect or block the sun heat.

For more tips and information on working safely in the heat, check out the Government of Alberta's booklet Best Practice Working Safely in the Heat and Cold, which is available at: <http://work.alberta.ca/documents/WHIS-PUB-G5006.pdf>

SUDOKU

Here's how it works:
 Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a puzzle, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you write, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

CAUSE FOR CRITTERS PET OF THE WEEK

Kittens, kittens, kittens galore! If you're thinking about getting a kitten now's the time! We have an abundance of these adorable little bundles of energy. Jabba is just one of them. Jabba lost her feline mom at a young age. Although her human mom loved her very much, she was unable to keep Jabba. After losing her second mom, Jabba finds herself swaddled in a new home — one that will be permanent. Despite all the transitions in her young life, Jabba remains super friendly and playful. Visit the shelter to meet even more of these cute kittens: Bay #3-5450-55 St., www.causeforcritters.ca, or 780-669-1297.
